A Message From Fr. Hinterschied

The U.S. Bishops met from June 11th-14th in Baltimore, and among the items discussed was a protocol titled "Directives for the Implementation of the Provisions of Vos estis lux mundi Concerning Bishops and their Equivalents." Vos estis lux mundi is the papal motu proprio of May 9, 2019, which prescribed procedures for holding bishops and religious superiors accountable for handling cases of sex abuse. It retains bishops as their own regulators, while acknowledging that their past failures have cost the Church considerably.

Rather, the more astonishing matter dealt with capital punishment. The bishops were informed by Rome that they were not to discuss the doctrine itself but were only to consider the translation of a papal revision of the Catechism, specifically paragraph 2267. In 1992, John Paul II had revised paragraph 2267, inserting a prudential opinion discouraging it. The latest 2019 revision exalts mercy at the expense of justice. Until the present day's disdain for doctrine, "mercy and truth are met together" (Psalm 85:10), but now mercy appears to devour truth altogether.

While John Paul's revision maintained the authentic teaching of capital punishment, the inclusion of a prudential opinion opened the way for abuse. Now this has happened in a blatant way. Specifically, the new section calls capital punishment "inadmissible because it is an attack on the inviolability and dignity of the person." As a legal term, "inadmissible" means that it is not relevant to the case. So capital punishment is to be treated as no longer relevant to justice, thus dismissing natural law and Scripture? This treatment of natural law and Scripture can make all moral doctrine fragile and all moral practice subjective.

Aware of the dangers, a group of bishops published a "Declaration of the Truths Relating to Some of the Most Common Errors in the Life of the Church of Our Time" which included (n. 28):

In accordance with Holy Scripture and the constant tradition of the ordinary and universal Magisterium, the Church did not err in teaching that the civil power may lawfully exercise capital punishment on malefactors where this is truly necessary to preserve the existence or just order of societies (cf. Gen. 9:6; John 19:11; Rom. 13:1-7; Innocent III, Professio fidei Waldensibuspraescripta; Roman Catechism of the Council of Trent, p. III, 5, n. 4; Pius XII, Address to Catholic jurists on December 5, 1954).

Let's continue to pray for the Church!

Rev. Fr. Michael J. Hinterschied, Pastor
– Saint Patrick Church
